

Southeastern Idaho Public Health

“Every day, in every way, empowering and improving health!”

Southeastern Idaho Public Health provides health services in eight counties in Southeastern Idaho, spanning a population base of approximately 158,000 people.

Environmental Health

Positions in Environmental Health handle permitting and inspections in numerous areas: child care, drinking water, food safety, home loan surveys, land development, mold and indoor air, pools, septic, and vector control. Environmental Health positions include: Environmental Health Specialists.

Community Health

Community Health provides clinical services, and promotes healthy lifestyles. The clinical services offered include: community health nursing, HIV/AIDS, reproductive health, women’s health screenings, and prenatal ancillary care. Health Promotion actively promotes our programs, coordinates public health preparedness, and provides public education in various areas: adolescent pregnancy prevention, arthritis, comprehensive cancer control, epidemiology (disease investigation), fit and fall proof, diabetes, oral health, tobacco cessation, and many more! Positions in Community Health include: public health nurses, clinical assistants, health educators, desktop publishing, epidemiologists, healthcare liaison, planner, and administrative assistant.

Nutrition Services

Nutrition Services runs the local Idaho Women, Infant, and Children (WIC) program that provides health assessments, nutrition education, and lactation counseling! Nutrition Services has positions for: registered dietitians, clinical assistants, peer counselors, and customer service representatives.

Administration

Administration provides support services to staff with positions in finance, purchasing, information technology, custodial, building maintenance, and human resources.

For more information about us, visit our website at: www.siphidaho.org